

while, people have been saying it's a bit of a problem, child got a class hamster and took it home, he killed the hamster up with food, and let it go (and who knows where he is right now) teachers have been saying, that if children don't stop this prozity they won't have enough money to get food given, to the childrens for lunch.

teachers have had to get inset days so they can afford enough to get from their houses to school (they live 2.16m away.) of the children walk to school because they live in the which means they have to wait at the gate because no one there to open the gate for them.

or a teacher called Mr Jones who brings his cat into school (it was GREAT fun) and the teacher had a cool cat that said "how are you!"

are good fun and there they're great to play with. But at some time there a bit difficult.

you have made some interesting points and I like the way you used brackets for extra information.
